PLATFORM MAKING .- It appears that the members of the United States Senate, who belong to the Democratic party, are now, in advance of the meeting of the party in Contion to the making of a "platform," for the purpose of harmonizing the views of the difenabled to go into the next Presidential election with some show of unity. It is very possible that the few men who are thus engaged may be enabled to fix up something that will satisfy themselves, but whether it will be so potential when it comes to be considered by their constituents, remains to be one way or another, according to the particular views of those to whom it addresses itself; but we are inclined to think that the rank and file are getting a little restive un der such an operation, and will demand something more tangible, explicit and direct than has heretofore marked the emanations of the platform-manufacturers of the party. Of this, however, the results at Charleston will soon fully advise us.
